The Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) has converted this paper record to digital format as part of ongoing projects to scan records of the Inventory of Historic Assets of the Commonwealth and National Register of Historic Places nominations for Massachusetts. Efforts are ongoing and not all inventory or National Register records related to this resource may be available in digital format at this time.

The MACRIS database and scanned files are highly dynamic; new information is added daily and both database records and related scanned files may be updated as new information is incorporated into MHC files. Users should note that there may be a considerable lag time between the receipt of new or updated records by MHC and the appearance of related information in MACRIS. Users should also note that not all source materials for the MACRIS database are made available as scanned images. Users may consult the records, files and maps available in MHC's public research area at its offices at the State Archives Building, 220 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, open M-F, 9-5.

BURIAL GROUND FORM

Bridge Road Burial Ground
Bridge RoadVISUAL/DESIGN ASSESSMENT X See continuation sheet.

Describe landscape features, gravestone material designs, motifs and symbols that are either common or unusual. Note any known carvers.

Bridge Road Burial Ground is larger than the Cove Burial Ground (see Form No. 803) and is located on a quieter, less trafficked area. Gravestones largely are randomly organized with a majority located in the southeast quadrant. The grassy, open, level nature of the yard with a few pine and cedar trees conveys an even stronger sense of a country burial ground in an earlier, less structured time. The front of the yard is enclosed by a fence of granite posts supporting iron rails similar to that at the Cove Burial Ground.

Bridge Road burial ground not only contains many stones with winged skull motifs, but also includes graves with cherub and with urn and willow figures demonstrating the development and changing taste of funerary art from the eighteenth to the nineteenth century centuries. A significant stone in the front row is that of Dorcas Shaw (d. 1797) whose carving presents a restrained energy in its low relief, absence of borders and serene, winged cherub surmounted by a flower and sprigs set in a triple indented tympanum.

A unique slate exists in the third row on the grave of Emeline Knowles (d. 1811). A crude, thinly-incised cherub exhibits a gloomy or pained expression and odd masses of hair or a nightcap, devised on a large attractive slate with a well-carved epitaph.

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE ____ See continuation sheet.

Explain religious affiliations, major period of use, and evaluate historical association of this burial ground with the community.

This burial ground was laid out when the second Congregational meeting house of Eastham (not extant) was built here in 1718 or 1720. Burials continued at the Cove Burial Ground, however, until 1770. This cemetery remained the burial ground until the third meetinghouse was built in 1830 (demolished in 1864) 1.5 miles to the north on State Highway (Route 6) where a third Congregational burial ground was created. Generally, burials at Bridge Road Burial Ground ceased in 1886, but an anachronistic stone is included for Emily Alexander (d. 1933) and Alice Baldwin Alexander (d. 1971).

If checked, see attached National Register Criteria Statement form.

A couple of notable child's stones exist. One, next to the grave of Dorcas Shaw, stands for Philander Shaw (d. 1800, aged 7 weeks) with a well-executed cherub-cum-portrait and simple, spare script. The other, in the forth row of the southeast quadrant, was placed for Warren Sparrow (d. 1812). Its lighter incision and lower relief is characteristic of the early nineteenth century.

Three stones have been identified by Hume and the Nelsons in Epitaph and Icon as the work of Boston carver, H. C. Geyer. One is in the center of the graveyard in the seventh row of the southeast quadrant. Erected for Jonathan Doane (d.1780), it has a very plain and hollow-eyed skull and cross bones occupying an otherwise undecorated, small, round tympanum on a plain square stone. Another stands four rows to the west on the grave of Samuel Doane (d. 1778). It has a late and interesting example of the winged skull motif with exaggerated, grotesque teeth. The third is the stone of Alice Freeman (d. 1779) which displays the same large teeth and an elongated version of inverted-heart shaped nose characteristic of the carver.

The stone of Nathaniel Atwood (d. 1769) is identified by Hume and the Nelsons as undeniably the work of William Codner's shop in Boston, if not the actual product of his own hand (William Codner Atwood died six months after Atwood).

Adjacent is the stone of Willard Knowles (d. 1786). Attributed to Lemuel Savery, it represents a transition from the early, tympanum, or "head and shoulders" stones to the square stones of the nineteenth century. Here a small, round tympanum holds a tightly-squeezed, ordinary, winged skull. Another Savery stone, near the road, that of Elijah Knowles (d. 1795) has a small, rounded-curve base.

It all began in 1964. Fred Jewell, then Curator of the fledgling Historical Society, asked Ken Collins if he would help fix the headstone of a certain Captain Michael Collins in the old Bridge Road Cemetery. (Ken Collins, at the time, was the Society's first President and chief engineer for the BOMARC missile complex at Otis Air Force Base.) Collins said yes, and between the two men, they grappled with the hefty 350-lb. stone (which had split in two), added a little epoxy glue, clamped the pieces together, and waited. Well, it didn't work. A week later, the stone was once again lying broken on the ground.

Ten years passed. Finally, one day in 1974, Howard Quinn suggested to Collins that maybe something ought to be done about the poor condition of gravestones in the Bridge Road Cemetery — perhaps as “a bicentennial project.” (Quinn was then a Selectman and President of the Historical Society as well; Collins was now teaching in the Industrial Arts Department at Nauset Regional High School.) Ken agreed to try it, “so long as I don't get shot at,” as he put it. In March 1975, he succeeded in restoring the stone of Mehitable Cobb using silicone rubber glue, plus a fiberglass matting coating, and a mixture of Valoil and turpentine as a sealer.

The rest is history. Collins was intrigued with “the challenge” and began repair work in earnest in the fall. The Bicentennial Commission contributed $100, as did the Non-Resident Taxpayers Association, and the Historical Society added $500 to the restoration project. Today, the town slates $200 a year to refurbish the gravestones — $20 apiece, which breaks down into $19.30 for materials and 70¢ for Ken Collins' labor of love. Further, it all comes with a warranty too. Collins is confident that the repair work will last his lifetime and that of his son. “If anything goes wrong,” says Ken, “a Collins will fix it.”

The results to date: 10 gravestones repaired in the Old Cove Burying Ground and 45 at Bridge Road. Also, once Ken got enmeshed in the task, his curiosity as to the history behind the two cemeteries led to still something else. In 1975-76, he conducted a survey of the two old burial grounds, which was then published by the Historical Society (and is still available for $1 at the Schoolhouse Museum and the Swift-Daley House). Such a survey had not been done for 70 years, and with close reading touches some of the very real human history of Eastham.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE by Peter Petrisko

The Cove Burial Ground, State Highway, Eastham dates from 1660 and is the oldest burial ground in Eastham which is associated with the First Congregational Church. Included in this burial ground are stones carved by Nathaniel Lamson or possibly James Gilchrist, both from Boston and well-known stone carvers. Buried here are the earliest settlers of Eastham and some passengers of the Mayflower. Burials continued here until 1770. The Bridge Road Burial Ground is associated with the Second Congregational Church with burials dating from 1754 to 1886. Stone carvers identified with some of the stones include H. C. Geyer, William Codner and Lemuel Savery.

Both these burial grounds are eligible for listing under Criterion A because of their early associations with Eastham and the Eastham Congregational Church and Criterion C because of the artistic quality of the stones and their association with notable stone carvers. They also meet Exception D because these burial grounds have graves of persons of transcendent importance to Eastham, their age and their distinctive stone designs and craftsmanship.
